A RARE DENARIUS OF CALIGULA AND DIVUS AUGUSTUS

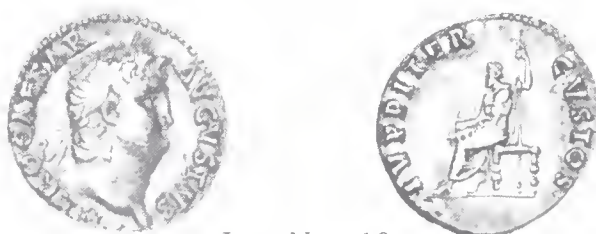

Lot No. 8

- 8 Caligula, 37-41 A.D. Denarius, 37-38 A.D. Lugdunum. Bare head of Caligula r.; C. CAESAR AVG. GERM. P.M. TR. POT. COS. Rv. Radiate head of the deified Augustus r. between two stars. RIC 10, BMC 3. A rare and attractive Very Fine. (1,500.00)

Caligula struck a small series of Denarii at Lugdunum which bear the portrait of a deified emperor on the reverse, but do not specify which one. Some of the portraits resemble Augustus, others Tiberius. The coins are deliberately vague. Early in his reign Caligula made a great show of honoring Augustus as the founder of the dynasty and the creator of the Principate, with implicit reverence for the Augustan principle of harmony with the Senate. Caligula also gave Tiberius a public funeral and duly paid the stipulated legacies from that emperor's estate. Nevertheless, Tiberius had become very unpopular in Rome towards the end of his reign, and while Caligula's actions were meant to portray himself as the dutiful successor, he may have been unwilling to honor Tiberius explicitly. The above coin provides a brilliant solution, commemorating more the imperial office than either Augustus or Tiberius specifically.

IMPORTANT LIBERTAS AMERICANA PLAQUE

- *1650 Libertas Americana. An undated, but apparently contemporary, Terra Cotta Bas Relief of the reverse of the famous "Libertas Americana" Medal, but without inscription. 332 mm. (approximately 13 1/16 inches) in diameter. Commissioned by Benjamin Franklin during his years as Minister to France, the Libertas Americana Medal commemorates the victories at Saratoga and Yorktown, and celebrates the grand American-French Alliance. Augustin Dupré, one of the foremost French medallists of his day and a personal friend of Franklin's, designed and executed the medal. The reverse is an allegory of the American Revolution as conceived by Benjamin Franklin. An infant Hercules holding snakes by their throats represents the new United States in its triumph over the armies of Burgoyne in 1777 and Cornwallis in 1781. Minerva, holding the shield of France, protects the young nation from the snarling British lion. This historic Terra Cotta sculpture is in superb condition and is worthy of the cabinet of the most discriminating American numismatist. (Estimate $1,000.00)
